

Pediatric care

Whether you just adopted your new puppy or kitten from a breeder, rescue or a shelter they need special care. At LePar animal hospital our doctors will examine your new family member, carefully looking for any evidence of congenital disease or other health issues. In addition to starting a proper vaccine schedule our doctors will also screen and treat for intestinal parasites. Additionally, our doctors will take time to counsel families on appropriate preventive care, heartworm prevention and testing, training, and nutrition. At LePar Animal Hospital this first appointment is crucial and because of that we dedicate extra time in order to ensure proper treatment, education, as well as answer all of our new pet parents questions. If you visit our client handout section you will find additional resources about selecting a new pet, training, and information on avoiding common pitfalls when adopting new pets.
